

Contractors—
Get Trained and
Certified for Energy
Efficiency and Green
Upgrades

FREE training series

Energy Upgrade California will open up new business opportunities for building professionals in Alameda County and pave the road to recovery for California's building industry. Launching in Fall 2010, the program will promote energy efficiency, indoor air quality and resource conservation through home upgrades, and will provide the training, marketing and financial incentives to put contractors back to work.

Participation Workshop (4 hours—dinner provided)

This FREE workshop is required to be listed as a participating contractor for Energy Upgrade California in Alameda County. City building and planning staff are also encouraged to attend the first hour for a program overview.

Schedule:

- Orientation (1 hour)
 - Program Overview followed by a Q&A session
- Participation Presentation (3 hours)
 - Participation opportunities
 - Training and certification requirements
 - Project eligibility and rebate and financing options
 - PG&E's Whole House Performance Pilot Program requirements
 - Ongoing support for Alameda County contractors

Basic Package Training (3 days—breakfast and lunch provided)

This FREE three-day training is required for contractors who are not BPI-Building Analyst certified. It provides in-depth information on the basic measures for single-family upgrades that qualify for rebates and can lead to a GreenPoint Rated label.
